No kissing – Pura Lempuyang Temple Bali is a very religious Hindu temple so any form of kissing in public is seen as scandalous. No drones – Photographers beware. Although there has been much drone footage of Pura Lempuyang Bali, we were told were weren't allowed to fly drone. What time to visit? – There's no specific time to visit Pura Lempuyang Temple. We visited at 7am for sunrise, although had to wait for the clouds to clear. So if you want a beautiful photo we recommend sunrise or sunset but keep your fingers crossed it's not cloudy. At that period, three priests were responsible for decision making about convictions of the prisoners. There Brahmana priests were known as harsh and rigorous. The palace was severely damaged by the Dutch in the early 20th century. The Hall of Justice remained the best preserved part of the palace and today it attracts many visitors. This building is built in typical Balinese style.
